Hi! new to the forum... and yes I signed up to try and get My Kustom to someone that may be looking for one, instead of explaining these things to a newbie!

I've had the amp since 1982, and hate to part with it, but want it to go to a good home.

K250 head (all efx)

2x12 cab.

Shiny Tuck and roll

a few cuts on top of the cab corners worn, tolex is thrashed... there, I said it!

missing one chrome port, name plate...

Head is in perfect working order

Replaced power cable with 3 prong

no cover

no pedal

Los Angeles area sale

Here's the thing about pricing, it is worth what someone is willing to pay. I have bought working amps with a JBL speaker in them for 75.00 and then I have paid as much as 500.00 but it was red and it was perfectly mint with a cover and pedal.

The problem is that the 2-12" cab which is 8 ohms,(and from the K100 or 1971 and latter K150 serise amps) if still stock was never offered by Kustom with a 4 ohm K250 model head. This will effect to a large extent how much you get as a package sale.

Color is important. You say the tuck and roll is "shiny", but what color is it?

For sure. The cab is supposed to use a different head than that one. Like a K150 or K-100 depending on the side view if the side view it is angled from top to bottom then k-100 if it is parallel then a k150 head.

The speakers have those cream-colored paper domes, like Acoustic used to use on their amps. Anyone know what brand those were?

The only way to know for sure is to see the backs of the speakers and have the numbers. You can only guess from the front. You can guess they are JBL's and find that someone reconed some cheap speakers and put 4" voice coil covers on them. Have to see everything to know for sure.
