I just picked up a beautiful k250-4 without covers. I would love to get the original covers, being a pureist and all but may end up with hard shell cases to protect the amp and bottom. Am I looking at a custom built case or does anyone know if there is something already out there that fits the tuck and roll dimensions ?

There are plenty of after market cover makers... I haven't found anybody offering OEM style (i.e. super heavy duty elephant hide). The vinyl/fabric covers currently available will suffice for almost all but the heaviest tour gigs, usually custom ordered... unless they have a Kustom listing from previous customer.

Similar story for cases. You may find an old fibre case that (sorta) fits that was originally designed as a drum trap case or something. ATA style case will most likely have to be custom ordered since there is so little demand for any that fit Kustom.
