Hey there, I spotted a green k100 head in a local shop recently. Was this kolor even offered by Kustom? Or was it just a discolored Cascade?

Could also be a faded out charcoal.....couple of my cabinets look like sea weed green.

I don't think that there was a green naugahyde when these amps were being made. I know that later on there were green Krossroads amps.

Probably a really discolored blue or cascade.

Thanks all, your thoughts have confirmed what I was thinking. The amp was not taken very good care of to begin with as it showed many tears in the T&R so it was probably left in unfavorable conditions as well. Great resource we have here!

Remove one of the metal glides on the bottom of the head.....the color should be protected there.

Yellow and Blue make green , the clear that the blue sparkle resides in has yellowed , Cascade good over to heavy green when the clear goes ages and goes yellow!
